

Synopsis

An original screenplay, a romantic comedy adventure, set in the mid 1980's. Pre-internet, two lifelong friends in their early 60's. Alice a naturopath, Grete a doctor, both widows and semi-retired. After a brief encounter at their local croquet club in Richmond, with an old flame, Alice, a bored impulsive, persuades Grete they need to spice up their lives and hires a grumpy aging detective to track down their old boyfriends from the 1940's. Alice's nephew Danny a mechanic and aspiring musician is persuaded to restore their ancient side cars. The ladies hit the road travelling across the UK, Ireland, and America, of course not everything goes to plan. Some of the old flames include a serial philanderer alcoholic, priest, and a gay writer. Alice fails to tell Grete no-one is expecting them and their first encounter is more than a surprise. In the meantime, Grete's young niece, Jennifer returns to Britain from New York to study at Cambridge. Danny has forgotten to collect Jennifer from the airport they end up in a heated exchange, after Danny is several hours late. He then accidentally hits the reverse gear stick whilst Jennifer is placing her bag into the boot and drives over her foot. Tempers fly but so does attraction that soon blossoms into romance. An insightful comedy about how romance can find it's way into unsuspecting hearts of those old and young.
